Outdoor Learning for Social and Emotional Learning & Wellbeing

The first training course Outdoor Learning for Social and Emotional Learning & Wellbeing, organized by Euromentor, took place in Barcelona, between April 8th-12th, 2024. The activities carried out within this course had as their theme the development of emotional and social intelligence through outdoor activities.

Through experiential learning, collaborative activities, and site visits, participating teachers gained the knowledge, skills, and resources necessary to create outdoor learning experiences that support students' social and emotional development.

Erasmus+

Outdoor education allows a high level of creativity and ingenuity, both on the part of the organizer of the activity and on the part of the participants, in terms of designing the activity, implementing it or presenting the different solutions identified in solving the problems raised.

The training courses within the Erasmus+ projects, as well as the socialization with other teachers from European Union countries, have given a European dimension to teacher training processes and have offered a new approach to classes or counseling and guidance. Also, these courses meant an improvement in communication skills and the use of methods to stimulate creative and critical thinking in relation to the students of the college, by implementing the knowledge gained.
